AMERICANS IN A MAN'S WAR.

IT DOES not take long to measure up the ability and resources of the United States when one takes into consideration the gigantic task assumed by the masters of finance and the captains of industry in regenerating the railroads of the world. Russia asks for 2500 locomotives as blandly as a child begs for a stick of candy and she is going to get what she wants if every railroad in the United States has to be torn up and dismantled. The railroad genius of this country is behind the movement to furnish transportation facilities for the whole world and, when the task is accomplished, it will be observed that the work was done as smoothly and as quickly as sending a division of troops across the Atlantic. Uncle Sam is going into this war with the same generosity that he went into the Belgian relief business of feeding 15,000,000 people from a base 3000 miles across the waters and almost as many more across the continent to the grain fields of the northwest. France appeals for railroad builders and forthwith orders are issued for several thousand trained railroad men to assume the task. The call meets with instantaneous response and by this time probably a division of engineers is moving across the Atlantic with every article that can be needed in the business of constructing railroad lines through a ravaged and devastated country. We are not going into this war like the petty kingdoms and principalities whose support was conditioned on receiving aid from the side they favored. That is not the kind of a game we play for our armies are entering the field with every conceivable form of motor power from the huge, ungainly and highly destructive tanks from Stockton, Cal., to the speedy motorcycle from Kalamazoo. Nothing is lacking and nothing will be found wanting when it comes to slizing up the demands of an aggressive power. We are going to deliver the goods and send home the punch that will land in the solar plexus of the greatest fighting machine organized in Europe. Germany took 40 years to prepare for an invasion of a peaceful nation and boasted of the facility with which it overran little Belgium, but the Germans will find that their science and carefully mobilized resources do not stack up with the offerings of the young United States. We are a peaceful nation and not prone to boasting of our prowess in the field but, when it comes to a ground hog case, the Stars and Stripes will float over an advancing host that knows neither favor nor fear. Our boys are there for cold business and their shirt sleeve warfare, devoid of all ornamental trimmings, will be exactly what it looks like. Any one who was favored with a glimpse of the boys on the border when they were held in leash by political exigencies knows the impression conveyed by the thousands of men marching over the desert in a blistering sun with shirt sleeves cut off or rolled up like Trojan bents on executing orders. The equipment of our army is more business like than that of any other nation, for there is something sinister about the steady driving away of the manhood of the United States arrayed in armed force. When boys fresh from shops and desks who had not been inured to the severe hardships of forced marches across a merciless desert, succeeded in covering distances in the orbit of the sun that would appal an European general, we can easily estimate what the same force will do when trained to the fine edge that characterizes the regular army of the present day. The exposure on the Mexican border was a training for the rigors of war that will bring results in the present hostilities. The boys will not require any hardening process to fit them for action. The only requirement will be a course of instruction in the latter day methods of fighting and then the best elements of American manhood will be released for deadly execution.

It is pathetic to read of the enthusiastic greeting of the French republic whose people could not be brought to realize that help was coming from across the seas in such short order. They hoped and they read and re-read the statements that the great western nation was girding its loins to help them, but it never occurred that such celerity of assembling and organizing was possible in a country whose hundred million inhabitants were devoted to peaceful pursuits. As the dispatches admit the hurried departure from the United States was designed more for a moral effect than for actual participation in hostilities at an early stage of the game. The presence of our boys has had the psychological result. The people were despondent and almost despaired of ending this apparently interminable war. They saw their brothers, husbands and fathers sink in the blood soddened battlefield and realized that they were almost at the end of their human resources. Help could only come from Heaven, which had turned a deaf ear to their appeals when they were heartened by the presence of the rough and ready soldiery from across the waters. One glance satisfied them that these young western giants had the vim and vigor to inject fresh life in the war and therefore they took courage and went forward with their own preparation with that buoyancy that has never deserted the Gallie race. It was another illustration of the coming of Phil Sheridan from Winchester, 20 miles away, to cheer his disheartened troops who were yielding to the impetuous charges of Early and Lee, and by his mere presence rallied the wavering line and turned them back to face the foe in a reversion of courage that drove the Confederate forever from the beautiful valley of the Shenandoah so eloquently depicted by Thomas Buchanan Read in the following verse:

The first that the general saw was the groups
 Of stragglers, and, then the retreating troops;
 What was done—what to do—a glance told him both,
 And striking his spurs with a terrible oath,
 He dashed down the line 'mid a storm of hurrahs,
 And the wave of retreat checked its course there, because
 The sight of the master compelled it to pause.
 With foam and with dust the black charger was gray,
 By the flash of his eye and his nostril's play
 He seemed to the whole great army to say:
 "I have brought you Sheridan all the way
 From Winchester town to save the day!"

"BATTLE CRY OF FEED 'EM."

THIS is the slogan in every home in the land," says Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the national emergency food garden commission, "and that slogan should be heard in every school house in the land. Why not use the schools of the country as community canning centers two or three times a week? What better place could the people of the town or city have for meeting and furthering the work of feeding themselves and by helping the government feed the soldiers? They are closed now and should be used to hold canning rallies.

"Reports coming to the commission in our nation wide survey of the garden planting situation show that the women are planning to can and dry food as never before.

"The commission stands ready to send free a canning or drying manual, for a two cent stamp to pay postage, to any woman in the United States. Make the kitchen your first line trench and shoot the requests for this expert free instruction with as rapid fire as you please.

The women will do their bit if they have the proper instruction in the most up-to-date methods of conserving the food supply. The commission will work night and day to give it to them—all they have to do is to ask for it."

P. S. Risdale, the secretary of the commission, announces that the state by state survey is being rapidly compiled from estimates of garden planting being made by newspapers, chairman of planting committees and chambers of commerce.

Tom Watson, the Guardian of Liberty, is once more under the ban of the law for opposing conscription. Watson appears to be one of those fellows who are willing to let some other person's forefathers do all the fighting in America.

Regulation is better than prohibition any day. This is no time to travel over ethics in the conduct of the war. This is the time for all good citizens to stand together and abide by the motto of live and let live. Southern statesmen are strong on the dry business since they don't raise barley or hops.

Silver is availing when it can advance four cents an ounce while the quotation is flashing across the continent.

A little more of that centralization stuff that knocks a dollar and a half off the price of coal makes a home run with American people.

Mexico is at its old trick of "borrowing" money from Americans.

EPIDEMIC IN RUMANIA

(Correspondence Associated Press.)
 TOKIO, June 7.—Rumania has asked Japan to send 100 physicians and Japan will probably comply. It is said that epidemics are prevalent in Rumania.

SUBTLE POISON GIVEN HORSES

(Correspondence Associated Press.)

TOULOUSE, France, June 7.—Cavalry horses have been dying in large numbers from a mysterious disease in different regions of the south of France. The mortality has reached 60 per cent to 70 per cent of new contingents arriving at Toulouse, Albi, Bordeaux, Narbonne and Perpignan. Horses apparently sound and well when they are unloaded from the cars die so soon after being stabled that it is impossible to treat them. The situation dates from 1914, soon after the declaration of war. The mortality was greatest in the spring of 1915 and it is still alarming.

Horse dealers and veterinaries of Toulouse have been unable to account for this strange epidemic. Some veterinaries assume that it is an infectious influenza; others suspect that a subtle means of slow poisoning is practiced on the animals while en route from the farm to the cavalry depot.

HOWARD COULTER ACCEPTED FOR ANNAPOLIS ACADEMY

Mrs. Maud Coulter, assistant county auditor, has received advice that her son Howard has been formally accepted in the United States naval academy at Annapolis. The candidate for naval honors is well known in Tonopah where he was reared and went to school, so the following notice from the Palo Alto Times will be read with interest:

"Howard Nixon Coulter, by reason of passing the United States naval academy entrance examinations, will leave tomorrow for Annapolis. Coulter is one of three boys to pass the final examinations which were given to the ten young men appointed by Congressman Hayes. The two other successful boys, who will work under Uncle Sam as Robert Hickey of Gazelle, and Norman McKee, of Redwood City. Coulter hails from Tonopah, Nevada, where he went to school before coming here eight months ago.

"Eight of the candidates for positions took courses at a coaching school in San Francisco. This school makes a specialty of instructing prospective students for positions at Annapolis and West Point Academies, and Fred Boone and Atherton Macdonald are two local boys taking work at that school in preparation for admittance examinations to Annapolis. Coulter, however, did not go to the city school, all the coaching he received being done by Miss May Adams of this city.

"Coulter was to have graduated with the senior class of the local high school next month, but as he leaves for the east tomorrow his diploma will be given to him a few weeks in advance. His work at the Palo Alto high school has been of the highest order, and there is no doubt that he will make good in the government's employ.

"In the short time he has been in this city Coulter has made a host of friends who, although sorry to see him go, are glad to see him go to the government's employ.

THEFTS BY WOMEN

(Correspondence Associated Press.)

LONDON, June 7.—The postoffice authorities have found a way to reduce the large number of thefts of silks, satins and other articles of women's finery that followed the employment of thousands of women as letter carriers and sorters in the postoffices of the country. They transferred the handling of these articles back to men and the thefts ceased at once.
